PUBLIC TO INSPECT NEW RESERVOIR

The pubiic is invited to inspect the new 1,000,000 gallon reservoir, located on the highest peak in Daly City, 740 feet above sea level, on Thanksgiving morning, next Thursday, November 26, at 11 o'clock.

The members of the police department and Daly City Boy Scouts will direct the traffic to this spot at the top of the Crocker tract. It is hoped to have a brass band of thirty pieces, which will present a concert on the top of the reservoir After the christening of the reservoir by a popular young Daly City girl, Mayor H. H. Smith will turn on the valve that will fill the reservoir and give a greater supply of good, pure water to our system, with a greater pressure to the higher portions of Daly City for fire protection.

Chief Kennedy has prepared a water display, following the christening ceremony, when several large streams of water will be shot high into the air, and moving pictures will be taken of the spectacle, to show the world that Daly City has a fine supply of pure water.

This new reservoir has been erected by the City Council with funds taken from the general fund, after years of study and saving, thereby avoiding a bond issue or direct tax.

All residents of Daly City should be on hand next Thursday to inspect the water system that will add to the slogan of "Daly City is a good place to live."

K. OF C. MEMORIAL EXERCISES SUNDAY

Daly City Council No. 2712, K. of C., will hold their memorial exercises for deceased members next Sunday afternoon, November 22, at 3:30 o'clock, in Eagles Hall. These services are beautifully exemplified and well worth attending. Relatives of the deceased members, their families and friends, Catholic Daughters and the public are invited to be present.

Inter-council visiting is receiving the support of many of the members. A delegation spent Monday, November 9, visiting San Mateo Council and report having had an enjoyable time. San Jose and Palo Alto Councils were also well represented. A visit to Palo Alto Council on Wednesday evening, December 9, has been arranged, and Palo Alto is looking forward to entertaining Daly City in elaborate fashion on the occasion. The time of departure and the meeting place will be set at the next meeting, December 1.

December 18 is the date tentatively set for the Christmas charity whist. This affair, sponsored jointly by the K. of C. and Catholic Daughters, is intended to raise the necessary funds to care for the charities usually contributed to by both organizations.

The members of General Pershing Parent-Teachers' Association held a meeting at the home of Mrs. H. S. Howe, on Acton street, November 13, for the purpose of taking courses in First Aid and Child Guidance. A very interesting article was read on the latter subject by Mrs. Forester. The members of General Pershing P. T. A. are desirous of enrolling the full quota of members to obtain this course. Those interested please phone Delaware 4521.

It may not be generally known, but the General Pershing school won the silver ribbon at the San Mateo Flower Festival parade for their splendid display.

CHILD STRUCK DOWN NEAR SAFETY ZONE

A Nash touring car driven by Mrs. C. Tusi, of 15 Ward street, Healdsburg, struck Jean White, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. White, of 46 Mission Circle, last Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, the accident happening near the safety zone on Mission street near Knowles avenue.

The mother was crossing the street with her two children. For a moment she did not have the little one by the hand, and the child broke away from her and was struck by the car, receiving a sligth injury to her left ankle. The child was examined by a local doctor and later removed to her home.

'JOT AND TITTLE' SERMON TOPIC

Do you know what a jot and tittle are? This is to be the sermon theme in Grace Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning at 11. In these days of nervous strain an hour spent in church in the Sunday morning is the best hour of the week and will go far to ensuring peace and happiness during the coming week. God has given us all the time we ought to have. Take time.

POSTER DESIGNED BY DALY CITY BOY

Members of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, take pride in the fact that the American Legion poster now being displayed on billboards all over the United States was designed by a Daly City boy, W. P. Sheehan, son of Mr. T. Sheehan, local real estate dealer, of 62 Templeton avenue.

Mr. W. P. Sheehan, who is employed by one of the largest advertising firms in Chicago, was a resident of Daly City for over twenty years. He was a pupil at Polytechnic high school and the Sheridan school in Ocean View. He was connected with the Foster & Kleiser advertising firm for a number of years before going to Chicago, where he has made an enviable record.

Several members of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, went to Mills Field last Sunday to witness the American Legion aerial roundup. Three planes landed, crrying Legion officials, bringing in membership dues, gathered from all over the state.

Now we know why Comrade Forde had that big smile the last few days. Congratulations, old boy.

The social committee is preparing for another social and dance to be held on Friday evening, November 27. Music will be furnished by the Post's haywire orchestra. Everyone is invited, so bring your friends. There will be refreshments.

Comrade Prizborowski was confined to bed for a few days, but is up and around again. Can't keep an old soldier down.

It has been decided to hold another American Legion night at the Belmont race track, Tuesday evening, November 24. All money taken in at the gate will be given to five American Legion Posts in San Mateo county, to be added to their relief and unemployement fund. Tickets can be purchased from any Legionaire.

Due to the muddy condition of the courts, caused by the recent rains, there was little horseshoe playing last Sunday. Weather permitting, the members of the Post will be out this Sunday. It's a good outdoor sport that gives you that school girl complexion.

The San Mateo County Council of the American Legion will hold their meeting in the Daly City court room, Friday, December 4. All Legionaires are invited to attend.

CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS INSTALL NEW OFFICERS

As the climax of a term marked by a large growth in members and in the breadth of activities, Court St. Mary, No. 1155, Catholic Daughters of America, celebrated the close of its year's work on Friday evening, November 13. Installation of officers, greetings, addresses, entertainment and refreshments were the features of the affair. Baskets of blooms, autumn flowers and greenery effectively decorated the hall for this special occasion. Guests of honor included Mrs. Frank I. Mollett, National Director of Catholic Daughters of America, Mrs. Mary Collins, District Deputy of San Francisco, and Mrs. Robert H. Young, of Court San Francisco.

District Deputy Mrs. Anita K. Mayer, assisted by Miss Gertrude McDonough, of Court Golden Gate, installed the newly-elected officers. The gavel of authority was again placed in the hands of Grand Regent Mrs. Josephine T. Johnson, who was presented with a beautiful gift from the Court.

Addresses were made by the visiting grand officers and congratulations and best wishes extended by the large number of visiting members from the Bay region and the Peninsula.

During the evening delightful refreshments were served. A one-act play, "The Burglar," was presented in a particularly pleasing manner by the following cast: Miss Marion Millett, Miss Rose Bauer, Miss Mildred Ross, Miss Mae Varni, and Miss Victorine Bertini, under the direction of Miss Mary Belli.

It was a delightful occasion for this popular Court of Catholic Daughters and all extended heartiest greetings and good wishes to the following officers:

Grand Regent: Josephine T. Johnson; Vice-Grand Regent, Margaret Fields; Prophetess, Claire Kell; Lecturer, May Egan; Monitor, Marion Millett; Historian, Helen M. Rode; Financial Secretary, Carolyn Kell; Treasurer, Callista Dalton; Sentinel, Celeste Altieri; Trustees, Alma Parmisano and Susan Cullen; Organist, Adele Hecht; Chaplain, Rev. Father James P. Donohoe.

Court St. Mary will hold its regular monthly whist party and social on Friday evening, November 27, in the parish hall, Daly City. The officers of the Court have this affair in charge and an enjoyable evening is assured all who attend.

GROCERY CLERK IS FATALLY STRICKEN

Louis von Oesen, of Bartlett street, a grocery clerk employed by Gustave Kroncke, of Evergreen avenue and Hanover street, was stricken ill last Saturday morning at 8:15 o' clock, and was taken to St. Luke's hospital by Chief of Police John T. Doyle, assisted by George Samuelson, of 245 Peoria street, and Carl Carlson, of 59 Rice street. At the hospital the stricken man was examined by Dr. B. J. Conroy.

Kroncke, the grocer, said that Louis opened the store alone as usual about 7:30 Saturday morning. Samuelson, a customer, found the clerk lying on the floor. It was said that the clerk had been drinking heavily during the previous week and had been off duty for the previous four days.

The stricken man was later removed to the Mission Emergency hospital, where he passed away at 8:40 o'clock, before his sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry von Oesen, of 329 Frederick street, could reach his bedside.

Louis von Oesen was 23 years of age, unmarried, and was a native of Germany. He was well known in Daly City, having been employed by Ed Knoll, of Mission street, for several years before he entered the employ of Kronke.

An autopsy was performed by Dr. A. A. Berger, of San Francisco.

The funeral was conducted from a San Francisco undertaking estblishment last Monday afternoon.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The P. T. A. meeting of Jefferson High on last Tuesday evening was one of the most delightful of the present school year. While the attendance was not much larger than at previous meetings, the spirit of the occasion was exceptionally fine. No doubt this was in a large measure due to the whole-hearted co-operation shown by the entire membership.

Councilmen Arthur Bodien and Julius Twesten were present. Mr. Bodien presented to the school, through the P. T. A., a beautiful bronze plaque of Abraham Lincoln, to remain the property of the school, but to be used in some way to stimulate the pupils in the study of the life of Lincoln.

At the request of Mrs. McIsaacs, president of the Association, Principal James Ferguson accepted the gift on behalf of the school, and expressed appreciation of the thought which inspired it. "This is one of the most inspiring acts of co-operation between a leading citizen of our community and the high school," Mr. Ferguson said. "It is an outgrowth of the Parent-Teacher Association movement. No longer can the public school hope to function unless there is such co-operation. Our boys and girls are as bright as they were a generation ago, as willing to learn, as eager to do the right as ever they were. But they are surrounded by distracting influences such as no other generation ever knew. For instance, too many times the home has become a place where study is impossible, due to

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

The Rhythm Orchestra of the R. S. Thorton school is making rapid progress under the leadership of Master Domecus. The new capps add greatly to the appearance of the young musicians, many of whom are only 6 years of age. The orchestra plays every Friday afternoon under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Miller, the kindergarten teacher.

Representatives of the Seventh and Eighth grades of the district met at Woodrow Wilson last Thursday to discuss Block Letters. It was decided by the delegates that to qualify for a team a student must first be a good sport in the school room, his sportsmaship being judged by his classmates. To qualify for a Block letter he must be a good sportsman on the field, to be judged by teammates. Then he must play in two winning games out of four. Block Letters are to be awarded in volley ball, basketball and baseball.

Friday, the 13th, proved an unlucky day for the Colma boys. They lost two practice games of volley ball to Woodrow Wilson.

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. met for their regular meeting on Tuesday at Woodrow Wilson. There was a good attendance in spite of inclement weather. Miss Pansy J. Abbott, county superintendent of schools, was present as a guest of the organization. She gave a very interesting talk. The community should be proud of this enthusiastic group of welfare workers. They devise all sorts of ingenious methods of raising funds for the comfort and needs of our school children.

Friday night the Boys' Club of Woodrow Wilson enjoyed a skating party. This club is sponsored by Mr. Mathews. We should be gratified to have more of the Woodrow Wilson boys make an effort to come up to the standards of this club.

The Fifth grade of Vista Grande has begun work on the sand table project of the term. The boys and girls are modeling the Missions in clay.

The following boys and girls from the Fifth grade are singing for the monthly meeting of the P. T. A.: Caroline Woodside, Lorraine Primeas, Florence Christian, Nancy Heim, Gene Yow, Grace Giomi, Leslie Lowenthal, Silvio Tringale, Ernest Foss, George Johnston. Patsy Schoening is giving a Thanksgiving recitation.

Friday, November 13, the Crocker girls volley ball "B" team played Woodrow Wilson's "C" team at Woodrow Wilson. The Woodrow Wilsonu "C" team won.

Miss Almquist's class at Crocker school won the cake that was donated to the P. T. A. to be awarded to the class having the most mothers present at the last meeting.

PARENTS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL

A special invitation to fathers and mothers to attend the Sunday school of Grace Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning at 10 is given by Mr. William R. Rae, superintendent. Come and meet with these happy children and hear them sing the old-time Gospel songs.

BOARD DISCUSSES HOSPITAL PLANS

The members of the San Mateo county board of supervisors were not in full accord in their opinions about the scale of charges submitted by private hospitals in the county for treatment of highway accdent victims, at the meeting held in Redwood City last Monday. Dr. C. V. Thompson, Burlingame supervisor, and chairman of the supervisorial committee named to investigate the charges, warned the board that acceptance of the plan as submitted might work a hardship on San Mateo county.

Dr. Thompson pointed out that should the board accept the proposition of the hospitals as originally submitted, the costs might reach the staggering total of $100,000 a year, which he declared would be prohibitive. Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, of South San Francisco, also a member of the committee, argued in favor of the schedule submitted, on the plea that treatment should not be measured from a financial standpoint.

After considerable discussion in which other members of the board seemed favorably disposed toward Dr. Thompson's plan of mixing a little economy with mercy, the committee was instructed to investigate further and report back to the board with any substitue plan they might care to offer. John W. Poole, of Redwood City, is the other member of the committee. Meanwhile the county has notified hospitals that all reasonable charges will be paid by the county for accident victims unable to meet the cost themselves.

Following a protest from the county Building Trades Council against the awarding of an electrical contract to an outside firm for fixtures at the Community hospital, the supervisors went on record to exclude all outside contractors from submitting bids on county work in the future.

The building trades council, with painters, decorators and paperhangers, protested against the establishment of an itinerant camp in San Mateo county. The trades unions maintained that the county should use the $1,000 appropriated on permanent residents who are unemployed, then if they had anything left for itinerant benefit, to use it after needy home folks had been cared for first. The protests were referred to the county unemployment committee.

The East Palo Alto Women's Club requested the supervisors to go on record as favoring a moratorium for unemployed home owners about to lose their homes because of inability to meet payments. The board took no action on this request.

Joseph Bettencourt, San Bruno, was awarded the contract for the completion of the clinic in the new wing of Community hospital. The cost will be $4,530.

At the request of Dr. Thompson, the board appropriated $2,000 to aid in the repaving of Broadway between the railroad and Bayshore highway, Burlingame.

County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman submitted new election precinct boundaries for the county and notified the board that twenty precincts had been added to the 180 already created. Approval of the new precincts was delayed until the first meeting in December. In the new plan Burlingame gets one additional precinct, San Mateo two, and Redwood City gets four.

County Surveyor James S. James was instructed to draw plans for the completion of Memorial Park sanitary system.

Action on the changing of township lines to make them conform with the supervisorial lines was delayed until December 21.

Cattle inspection fees were reduced from 85 cents each to 70 cents, at the request of County Veterinarian W. C. McLean.

BURLINGAME LABOR OFFICIAL MURDERED

Benjamin Reinisch, business agent for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, local 266, and a resident of Burlingame for five years, was shot to death by a mysterious assassin as he was entering his offices in San Francisco Tuesday morning. Police said he was killed by an unidentified assailant, who apparently had hidden himself in the office.

Reinisch was shot through the heart. A bunch of keys lying nearby indicated, police said, that he was killed as he unlocked the door and entered the office. Telephone wires into the office had been cut.

Investigators said Reinisch's organization was not affiliated with a bonafide labor movement. The local, they said, is composed of so-called secessionists who disavowed the parent organization fifteen years ago and formed an association of their own.

EXTEND TANFORAN RACING TO JAN. 2

Following the presentation of a petition from the majority of horsemen now racing at Tanforan, supplemented by requests not only from those in San Francisco but more largely in the county of San Mateo, the Tanforan management last Monday announced that its present meeting would be extended until Saturday, January 2, inclusive.

The following additional stakes have been opened, to close a week before the running of each:

December 12—The Islam Temple Uniform Bodies Handicap for two year olds and upwards; not less than $5,000 added; A. B. Spreckles course.

December 19—The Elks Handicap, for two years olds and upwards; not less than $5,000 added; one mile and a sixteenth.

December 5—The Chistmas Handicap, for two years olds and upwards; not less than $5,000 added; one mile and an eighth.

December 26—The A. B. Spreckels Memorial Handicap, for two year olds; not less than $2,500 added; six furlongs.

January 1—The New Years Handicap, for three year olds and upwards; not less than $5,000 added; one mile and a sixteenth.

January 2—The Farewell Handicap, for three year olds and upward; not less than $2,500 added; six furlongs.

The management reached its conclusion to extend the meeting after a careful appraisal of conditions.

Tanforan employs over three hundred men, 95 per cent of them residents of the Bay area. It has also in its racing colony over one thousand men and boys connected with racing stables. This does not include the owners and their friends who visit San Mateo county and San Francisco during the racing season.

The only question involved in the proposition was the doubt in the minds of some as to whether or not it would be a benefit or detriment to the Christmas shopping. After consulting, however, with many interested people, it was agreed that the majority of stables now here are owned by people who do not live in the Bay area, and that the owners, trainers and employes of such stables would do their Christmas shopping here in place of their own homes. This should give a tremendous impetus to trade during the holiday esason.

The same capable staff of officials will remain at Tanforan until the close of the meeting.

It was also announced that the Spring meeting will open on Thursday, March 31, an continue twenty-seven days to Saturday, April 30, inclusive.

The following stakes have been agreed upon for the Spring meeting:

The Tanforan Spring Special—Not less than $5,000 added, for three year olds and upwards; one mile and a sixteenth.

The Derby Candidates Handicap—Not less than $5,000 added, for three year olds; one mile and an eighth.

The Governor Rolph Handicap—Not less than $5,000 added, for three year olds and upwards; one mile and an eighth.

The Bay Area Handicap—Not less than $5,000 added, for three year olds and upwards; one mile and seventy yards.

The Au Revoir Handicap—Not less than $5,000 added, for three year olds and upwards; one mile and a sixteenth.

As at the Fall meeting, there will be no purse less than $800, and no handicap less than $1,200.

The dates for the Spring meeting are definitely and permanently set, and there will be no extension. This will enable Eastern horsemen to race at Tanforan and reach Chicago, Kentucky and Canada before meetings are open in those localities.

OLD GLORY POST NOTES

Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held their installation of offcers last Friday evening, November 13. The newly elected officers for the term of 1931-1932 were duly installed by Past Departmetn Commander Henry W. Leavitt. The officers for the ensuing term are: Walter F. Dorn, Commander; Leroy E. Johnston, Senior Vice; Joseph H. Bedford, Junior Vice; and Dave Refatti, Chaplain.

Many impressive scenes were enacted during the ceremonies, especially when Comrade Allen made the presentation of the Past Commander's jewel to Comrade Merle A. Nesby. Comrade Nesby responded with a short speech in which he declared his intention of supporting the Post in the future.

The officers elect of Old Glory Auxiliary were installed by Past President Iva Neely, and Sister Neely and her assistants are to be complimented upon the manner in which the ceremonies were conducted. To the tune of a spirited march, the officers were escorted to their respective stations, where they were instructed in the duties of their office.

The newly elected officers of the Auxiliary are: Ethel Dorn, President; Della Campbell, Senior Vice; Blanche Allen, Junior Vice; and Agnes Bailey, Chaplain. Lovely bouquets were presented to the installing officers, the Past President, Florence Nesby, and the new President, Ethel Dorn. Sister Nesby was escorted to the altar, where she was presented with the Past President's jewel.

At the close of the ceremonies, the official insignia, the Cross of Malta, was presented to the Post by the new President, who announced that a rising vote of thanks was due Sister Blanche Allen for the time and effort spent in the making of this cross. This request was heartily responded to by the entire audience.

The installation committee spent several weeks in preparing the program for the installation. The tables in the banquet room were decorated with centerpieces of assorted fall flowers. The Post room was also gorgeously adorned with huge baskets of flowers, supported by a background of ferns.

Upon completion of the installation, the members of the Post and the Auxiliary, together with their friends and guests, repaired to the banquet hall, where a delicous repast was served, consisting of home made cake and coffee, furnished by the ladies.

After the refreshments, the rug was rolled up and dancing was enjoyed by all. Our Fire Commissioner, from No. 5, participated in the grand march, and was later noticed to be leading his partner around the hall in circles. It was found necessary to send out a relief for him, as his antics would have made Charlie Chaplin seem like a rheumatic at a hot springs for treatment.

Captain Henry Henley, Chapman Post No. 1930, in Monterey, wishes to extend an invitation to all V. F. W. members in the Sixth district to attend their "Big Time", Saturday evening, November 28. Start making your plans to join the caravan now being formed by Old Glory Post.

both the merits and demerits of the radio. The programs that come over the air are so attractive and entertaining that the average home is tuned in during the entire evening, and the whole family listens in. Often the only question at issue is, which program shall we listen to. Even where there is a quiet room in the home, it is an exceptionally studious boy or girl that will overcome the temptation to listen to the latest popular songs, and, instead, study such subjects as mathematics or grammar, or history, or a foreign language.

"At no time has it been more necessary to stimulte pupils towards study than at present, and particularly towards the study of history and present world problems. Our high school pupils of today will be called upon to solve the economic and governmental problems that we, their elders, have not been able to solve, and that are the cause of the world's present economic depression. Republican government will soon be in their hands, and it will succeed only to the extent that these boys and girls are prepared to meet its problems. No other generation was ever called upon to prove in such measure that the government which Lincoln said was by the people for the people and of the people is fit to survive. And any act which will encourage our boys and girls in the study of our government, and the study of the life of such a leader as Abraham Lincoln, is worthy of deep appreciation."

Mr. Ferguson said a plan of essay writing on the life of Abraham Lincoln would be worked out whereby the students would compete, and the winners have their names engraved on the plaque which will hang in a prominent place in the high school.

After the business meeting the members played whist. This was followed by refreshments. The committee in charge consisted of Mr. and Mrs. McIsaacs, Mrs. Pescaro, Mrs. Truman Bentley and Mrs. Stella Jensen.

Information has been received from Superintendent Crane, of the Jefferson grammar school district, that the midyear graduation class this year will be larger than usual. Principal Ferguson is planning a program for the new freshman class, in accordance with the results of conferences he has had with Superintendent Crane. The problem of recitation rooms is one of the main difficulties in planning for the new students, Mr. Ferguson says.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

The Daly City District Council of the Boy Scouts of America held its regular meeting at the Daly City auditorium on Tuesday, November 17.

The usual routine of business being carried through, Mr. Bodien introduced J. T. McFadden, head of the organization department of the San Francisco unit council. Mr. McFadden outlined the theory of the district council and organization of its branches. The outstanding points covered were as follows: The Court of Honor and its chairmen, the several chairmen of camping, organization, finance and what ever other committees necessary. Mr. McFadden also stated that our name would be Daly City District Council, District 12, of the Boy Scouts of America. The district extends from the San Francisco county line, including Daly City, Colma and Lawndale.

District Commissioner R. Johnson announced that he would like to have all members of the council present at the meeting on December 1, as final appointments, resolutions and arrangements are to be made. The Commissioner especially asked that every organization have their representatives at the meeting if they are at all interested in the Boy Scout movement in Daly City.

Is your boy getting his share? Is he a Boy Scout or Cub? Remember, it's for your boy!

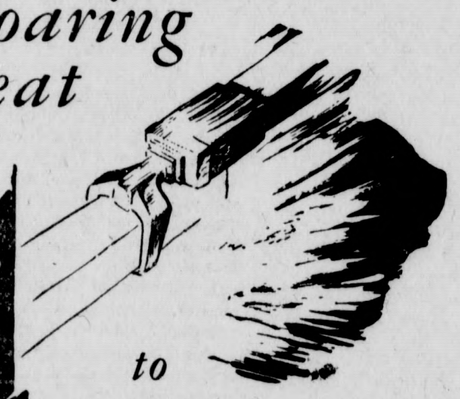
BUILDERS OF CALIFORNIA

from roaring heat



to SKYSCRAPERS, BRIDGES, SHIPS

7 of the 12 largest STEEL COMPANIES operating in California are depositors in Bank of America

Mighty "rolls" await the glowing ingot. From their brute embrace will come steel — for skyscraper or bridge, ship or automobile, pipe-line or machine . . . The average yearly production of California's steel and allied manufacturers is valued at six hundred million dollars.

They employ one-fifth of the wage-earners in all California manufacturing establishments!

Steel companies operating branch plants or cooperating in construction projects, use the service of convenient Bank of America branches for payrolls and local purchases.

For national concerns, the Bank transfers funds to eastern cities over its transcontinental network of private wires. Interbranch remittances are speeded by daily use of air mail.

Bank of America's unique facilities thus permit better control of working capital, with increased interest earnings.

In many ways, this Bank has helped to create new markets for the California steel industry.

The same modern statewide service, made secure by the ample resources of Bank of America, is available to you at a nearby branch.

Authority to abandon the Yreka Railroad Company line in Siskiyou County, operating over a line 7.7 miles long between Montague and Yreka, is asked of the State Railroad Commission in an application filed by the company. In a similar petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission, it is asserted by the company's president, H. A. De Vaux, that the railroad has never paid since it was constructed in 1888, and that in recent years, due to truck competition, it has not met operating costs. In August, 1929, the company asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to extend its line 38 miles from Yreka to Etna, and the right to issue $650,000 in capital stock. The latter request was denied. When the proceeding was reopened in 1930, the company asked that the matter be dropped from the calendar.

Bass fishing may be far removed from the field of business, but it has improved the earnings of the American Toll Bridge Company. During the bass season the travel of fishermen over the Antioch bridge reached large proportions. During the first nine months of this year the company had a net profit of $211,452 after bond interest and discount and depreciation and amortization charges. Gross revenues including other income of $6877, amounted to $1,051,228 from which was deducted operating expenses of $245,788, leaving an operating income of $805,440. Earnings, after deducting $222,345 for depreciation and amortization, were well in excess of interest charges on its outstanding first mortgage 7 per cent bonds. Reducing operating income by this amount, there remained $583,105 for the nine months, which compares with interest charges of $295,750 for the entire year, before deducting bond discount and Federal taxes.

How People Play

The Philippine Slapping Game.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

WITH interest in miniature golf waning, enterprising members of the "play industry" in a western city substituted fishing poles for golf clubs, fish for golf balls, and transformed the diminutive golf courses into fishing ponds, thus ushering in the "pee wee fishing grounds."

Play knows neither geographical boundary, nor historical limit. There was a law among the Persians by which all children were to be taught three things: horsemanship, shooting with the bow, and telling the truth.

Carthaginians and Phoenicians owed something of their maritime glory to a love of swimming, the sport by which they first mastered their fear of the sea. One wonders whether the more rapid strides made in England toward the political emancipation of women may not be traceable to the ardor of British women for outdoor exercise and sports.

Climate often determines the way a people play. It is obvious that coasting is popular in a zone where snow falls, and reasonable that those peoples most generally proficient in swimming should be found in the equatorial islands, where limpid waters invite surcease from the scorching sun; but less well known, perhaps, that card and board games developed in southern Asia, where zest for play is just as keen, but temperature dampens the ardor for exertion. To the Netherlands is traced the origin of stilt and skate which even yet have their work-a-day usé in flooded and frozen areas, but to the rest of the world they are playthings. Norway once had a regiment of skaters and Holland's soldiers were taught to drill and play on ice.

Just as the individual adopts games which meets his bodily needs, so national pastimes are modified to foster and fortify the peoples who play them. In the age of personal combat, there were men like Milo of Crotona, a veritable Samson, reputed to have been able to break a cord wound about his head by swelling the muscles; or Polydamas of Thessalia, said to have slain an infuriated lion, and to have been able to hold a chariot in its place while horses tugged at it.

Those were the times when boxing and wrestling, most ancient of sports, were in their heydey, though they were not always gentlemen's diversions, reckoned by modern standards.

Missle-Throwing Games.

When missle-throwing became the technique of warfare the Italian city youth reduced stone-throwing to a fine art, and in winter made use of snowballs on fete days. In Perugia as many as 2,000 would engage in this game. Defensive armor was worn but many fatalities resulted. Old English laws encouraged archery, and Charlemagne sought to popularize the sport. Play and love of competition have often been the mother of invention. The great automobile races have revolutionized the automobile industry. Benjamin Franklin, employing a boy's familiar plaything, snatched from the clouds a secret that outdoes the pranks of a magic carpet. On the other hand invention made popular certain ways to play. For example the invention of the rubber bladder was a boon to the game of football and the gutta-percha ball added immensely to the popularity of golf.

Theodore Roosevelt's influence is generally accounted in social, political, economic and literary fields; yet time may show that one of the most profound lessons he impressed upon American people was a deeper regard for healthful, vigorous, strenuous outdoor sport.

The story of how the weakling Roosevelt went to the open places of the West and played at bronco-busting and cattle-herding and later relaxed in African jungle from seven years in the hardest job in the world, is an oft-told tale. Such an uprooting of one's life, thanks to our national parks, is not necessary today. More and more it is the habit of young men and old to seek the health-giving recreations to be had in Uncle Sam's matchless play places.

Walking is one of the most healthful and invigorating "games" and is free to everyone. Yet it is much neglected by Americans. Perhaps the automobile is to blame in some degree; but the fact that walking is deliberate and lacking in that element so dear to the American heart, competition, also must be taken into account. To the seasoned pedestrian, "joy riding" cannot compare with "joy walking."

The Instinct Is Universal.

Sports of a nation afford an almost invarible barometer of its progress in civilization. Baseball is one of the most complicated and highly organized pastimes known to any people. It is a veritable instrument of the most delicate precision in the world of sport. A South Sea islander no more could play it than he could operate a linotype machine or deftly handle the paper money in a bank teller's cage.

Yet the instincts baseball satisfies—the zest of racing to a goal ahead of the ball, the deep satisfaction of diverting a swiftly moving object to serve his own ends, the mere impact of the speeding sphere against the instrument he controls, bagging the spheroid as it flies afield, the suspense of nine men as they await the batter's fate—each and all find their counterpart in play as old as animals that walk on two feet and have enough gray matter atop their spinal columns to control nature's laws for their human purposes.

The foot-race was the most popular of the 24 Olympian events. Romans batted balls with the forearm swathed with bandages, and the Gilbert islanders wrap coconut shells with cord so they will rebound to a blow from the open palm; Homer's princess of Phaeacia is represented in the Odyssey as jumping to catch a ball tossed by her maids of honor; and the Chinese had a game in which a suspended ball was kept hurtling to and fro by blows from the players.

Wrestling is much older than Greece, as indicated by bouts pictured on tombs along the Nile. In Greece boxing fell into disfavor among the Spartans for an unusual reason. The Greeks had developed sportsmanlike rules for the game, eliminating kicking, biting and ear pulling, and the bout closed when one boxer admitted his defeat. Lycurgus held it improper for any Spartan to acknowledge defeat, even in a game. Boxing and wrestling have been popular sports in Japan for ages.

Running, throwing, hitting and kicking are the fundamental muscular operations of America's characteristic sports—baseball, football, tennis and golf. The peoples of antiquity manifested all these instincts in cruder form. Luzon hillmen, the Polynesians and the Eskimo and Sumatra islanders had games played by kicking a ball. Greeks played it, and the Roman game, harpastum, derived its name from the Greek "I seize" which is evidence that carrying a ball was practised then.

In old England football was even rougher than most sports of those hardy times. James I thought it was "meeter for lameing than making able the user thereof." Edward II frowned upon it for its interference with archery and also because of the commotion it aroused. In those times it was played in the city streets. A writer of the Sixteenth century called it a "devilish pastime" and charged it with inciting "envy and sometimes brawling murther and homicile."

Tennis Goes Far Back.

One must also go back to the Greeks and Romans for the origin of tennis. In the Twelfth century a game with ball and plaited gut bat was played on horseback. Then came "La boude" in which the horse was abandoned. Louis X died after excessive playing of the game. Henry VIII was a devotee of the game. Until the Sixteenth century the hand was used for batting the ball, but soon the racket came into general use.

If tennis has a royal lineage, golf, which was later regarded as a rich man's game had most plebeian beginnings. Contrary to widespread belief, it seems not to have originated in Scotland, but in northern Europe. Apparently it was first played on ice, being one of the winter sports adapted to the physical geography of the Low countries. By the Fifteenth century golf had attained such vogue in Scotland that it threatened the cherished archery, and it was classed with "futeball" and other "unprofitabil sportis" by James IV.

America's love of play is a distinctive part of her Anglo-Saxon heritage. Where two or more English-speaking people get together, be it in Bagdad or Buenos Aires, their common tongue makes the point of contact, but it generally is their love of active play that forms the tie that binds their comradeship.

POULTRY

WINTER SUNSHINE GOOD FOR POULTRY

Ultra-Violet Rays Needed by Flock.

So much evidence has been accumulated about the value of winter sunshine in egg production that it cannot be ignored by poultry raisers who want to get profitable results.

It has been shown that ultra-violet rays are a powerful factor in increasing egg production, hatchability and fertility, as well as in maintaining healthful conditions.

Ultra-violet rays promote bone and body growth, and building vitamin D. During the winter months, when poultry is confined, ordinary glass and soiled cloth curtains bar them out and some means must be employed to make them available.

You need good housing and good management to get best results. Published data by such representative bodies as Wisconsin experiment station, University of Arkansas; Ohio experiment station and others have shown the effect of ultra-violet rays during the winter months. Records at egg-laying contests (notably the Vineland egg-laying contest) also give practical proof of the egg-producing value of ultra-violet rays.

Poultry needs winter sunshine. Layers must get ultra-violet radiation or its equivalent. This is also true of chicks. The wise poultry raiser will make sure his house is properly constructed this winter and next spring. —Ohio Farmer.

Size of Eggs Can Be Influenced by Feeding

Egg size is influenced by breeding and also by feeding. It is as natural for some hens to lay large eggs as it is for some cows to give a heavy flow of milk. It is important to select eggs of the desired size when saving for incubation, because the size of egg laid, to some extent, is inherited by the offspring. However, it is possible to influence the size of eggs to a considerable extent through proper feeding and a proper supply of minerals necessary for egg shell.

A ration of grain alone or even with milk will probably not give best results so far as egg size is concerned. A balanced ration carrying not less than 3 per cent of bone meal and possibly 1 or 2 per cent calcium carbonate in some form, like crushed limestone or calcite, is considered desirable for best eggs.

Plan Now to Increase Production of Eggs

One of the imperative needs of the poultry industry is to increase the consumption of eggs, said Reese Ricks of the International Baby Chick association, in addressing the American Institute of Co-operation at Manhattan, Kan. Other foods are giving eggs a battle for a place on the breakfast table, and according to Mr. Hicks, this is what can be done about it.

The first step toward increasing egg consumption is for producers to supply high quality eggs. The second step is in standardizing the product so that the public will know what it is buying. The third step is for cooperatives to join hands with other agencies in the poultry industry to educate the public as to the value of eggs.—Nebraska Farmer.

Poultry Facts

Oat hulls are not harmful to chicks if ground fine enough.

Among the incurable poultry diseases are chronic coccidiosis, tuberculosis, bacillary white diarrhea, fowl cholera, fowl typhoid and blackhead. Serious cases of chicken pox and roup might also be included.

The poultryman's biggest asset right now is the flock of new pullets that are being developed for next winter's laying flock, and whatever he can do to protect that flock so these birds will continue to lay, worth real money to him.

Culling a flock is one of the important things which is most commonly neglected. There is also a neglect to procure and keep pure-bred chickens. Vermin are commonly found in poultry houses.

Several poultry diseases are quite similar in many external symptoms. One or two additional symptoms usually, to the experienced, determine the accuracy of the superficial diagnosis. Post mortems prove the superficial diagnosis and therein lies experience.

Either whole oats or hulled oats may be used in a grain ration that is fed to chickens. However, hulled oats makes a better feed because a large part of the fiber is removed and the birds will, therefore, get a bigger percentage of grain.

Keep records of the number of eggs received each day and how they are disposed of. An account book will tell where the money goes and where the money comes from and will enable one to make economies on the one side and increase income on the other.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

In connection with the recent Fire Prevention Week, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde made a plea to farmers and rural dwellers to reduce the gigantic annual fire loss on farms—a loss said to total $100,000,000 in property and 3,500 lives.

Fire Prevention Week is over. But that advice is still good—and will always be good. Every fire prevented, as Secretary Hyde pointed out, represents that much gain for the community, and a reduction in farm fire losses is equivalent to an increase in farm income.

Every community should organize in an effort to prevent fire. It should do this, not for one week each year only, but for fifty-two weeks. Public opinion should be used to bring home to the individual his personal responsibility for fire. Every fire damages the whole community, and costs the whole community money. It is one case where one person's business is everybody's business.

Old-time "innocent amusements" are still innocent, but they are no longer amusements.

A man who is clever enough to be boss at home is also wise enough not to brag about it.

GARFIELD ANNIVERSARY

November 19 marked the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of James Abram Garfield, twentieth President of the United States, and the second chief executive of the nation to meet death at the hands of an assassin.

Garfield's early life was spent on a farm in Ohio, where the poverty of his family and lack of opportunities in that day prevented his obtaining much schooling as a boy. He worked on a canal boat and as a carpenter, finally being able to attend Williams College, from which he was graduated in 1856. He was president of Hiram Institute from 1857 to 1861, and served as a member of the Ohio state senate.

He was made a Lieutenant Colonel of volunteers at the outbreak of the Civil war, and rose to the rank of Major General. He left the army to become a Congressman from Ohio in 1863, serving as such until his inauguration as President in 1881.

On July 2, 1881, after less than four months in the White House, President Garfield was shot at a railroad station in Washington by Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office seeker, and died from the effects of the wound on September 19, at Elberon, N. J. Guiteau was hanged on June 30, 1882.

President Garfield was elected after a most interesting campaign. He received 21 electoral votes, while General Hancock, his opponent, received 155. Upon the death of President Garfield, he was succeeded in office by Vice-President Chester A. Arthur.

GREELEY'S HANDWRITING

Many stories have been told about Horace Greeley's notoriously poor handwriting, which was a constant nightmare to his associates, and especially to the printers, on the old New York Tribune.

One printer, being given a Greely manuscript to set up for the first time, exclaimed: "My God, if Belshazzar had seen this writing on the wall he would have been more terrified than he was." Later, it is said, Greeley wrote to the foreman, directing that the printer be discharged because he made so many typographical errors. The printer got hold of the note before leaving, and carried it to the foreman of another newspaper as a recommendation—and got a job immediately.

Once Greeley was invited to lecture in Sandwich, Ill. He wrote that as he was overworked and would be sixty years old on the following February third, he felt unable to take the engagement. After much labor in deciphering the letter, the committee replied that they would be glad to have him lecture on February third, and that the fee of sixy dollars would be satisfactory.

A MAN WITHOUT HATE

There has been published the interesting autobiography of H. Rider Haggard, the English novelist whose vivid tales have entertained and charmed millions of readers throughout the world. This autobiography was written several years ago, but Haggard stipulated that it should not be published until after his death, which occurred in 1926. The author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," and forty odd other stories, reveals a versatile and kindly personality, and recounts his adventures in various parts of the world. Perhaps the most striking passage is that in which he says: "I have known many emotions, all of them, I think, except that of hate."

What a fine thing it was to be able to say that! How many of us have known all the emotions except hate?

ANCIENT CLUB RULES

The custom among luncheon clubs of the United States, whereby a club is supposed to limit its membership to only one of each business or profession, recalls a similar rule of the famous Spectator Club, organized by Addison, the English essayist, more than two centuries ago.

In that day the rule was stated thus: "None shall be admitted into the club that is in the same trade with any member in it." Some other rules of the Spectator Club, however, find no counterpart among the modern regulations governing the Rotary, Kiwanis and similar organizations, but they are nevertheless interesting, the following being examples:

"If any member swears or curses, his neighbor may give him a kick upon the shins.

"If any member tells stories in the club that are not true, he shall forfeit for every third lie a helf penny.

"If any member brings his wife into the club, he shall pay for whatever she drnks or smokes.

"If any member's wife comes to fetch him from the club, she shall speak to him outside the door."

The last rule was considered quite necessary in a day when there were no telephones, and may have enabled a timorous husband to escape by the back door while a faithful steward assured his wife that he was not in.

IMPORTANT TO ALL OF US

Efforts to stabilize silver at a fair price are of importance to the public. At present silver is selling at profitless prices. The result is cessation in mining activity, with consequent unemployment, decreased buying power, and loss of taxes to the state. The restoration of silver, when accomplished, will be a public service, not only to this country, but to the entire world.

The observance of Fire Prevention Week has become a fixed habit with a good many janitors.

Gandhi has frequently appeared on the streets of London clad only in a loin cloth and fog.

THE FIRST PHONOGRAPH

In a letter written a few years ago, Thomas A. Edison said: "I conceived the idea of recording and reproducing human speech and other sounds on July 18, 1877."

Mr. Edison went on to say that he worked on his first model of the first phonograph during the following two months and that "this first model was entirely successful." He also declared that this model comprised all the basic principles which are still used in all phonographs and talking machines.

Many will remember the early phonograph records made on wax cylinders. These were greatly inferior to the later disc records, besides they were very fragile and short-lived. Still the principles used in recording and reproducing the sounds were the same as those employed up to the present.

The world owes much of its enjoyment and instruction to the idea born in Edison's fertile brain fifty-four years ago. It is gratifying that he was permitted to enjoy a long life in which to develop and witness the universal employment of this and other epoch-making inventions which he gave to mankind.

Complaint is made that many bootleggers are selling short pints and quarts. The Federal Trade Commission should look into this.

Instant hot water saves your time for pleasure

PLENTY of instant hot water takes 60% of the hard work out of dishwashing. It cleans two to twenty times faster.

Think of the time you can save by having an abundant supply of hot water always ready to use. All your household cleaning tasks are finished quicker. It is easier to keep things sweet and fragrant. The minutes you save on each task amount to hours each week—hours for pleasure.

Then too, a shower or a bath is yours instantly—morning or night— when you have instant hot water service.

The Automatic Gas Water Heater requires no watching. It heats the water, stores it, and shuts itself off. No gas is wasted keeping the water hot. The water stays hot because the boiler is insulated.

Hot water automatically costs less per gallon than any other method of heating water in the home.

Come into our office and see the Automatic Gas Water Heaters. You can have one installed for a small sum, the balance to be paid in monthly installments.

AUTUMN SHOWS GAIN AS TOURING SEASON

Mild weather extending into the autumn has lengthened the touring season and early fall travel has been unusually popular among motorists, according to the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association. The statement is based on the volume of inquiries received from motorists for tourist information. From other parts of the country come reports indicating a similar upward trend in autumn travel both for vacations and short outing trips.

The outlook for touring during the winter is also regarded as good. While the number of winter tourists may not be up to that of peak years, there are indications that it will be considerable. California and other sections frequented by the winter tourist are anticipating an active season of motor travel.

A sign that a greater number of motorists are beginning to appreciate the attractions of autumn touring in California is provided by National Park service figures on the arrivals in Yosemite Valley. During September this year there was an increase of eight and a half per cent over the same month last year, while October showed an increase of twenty-three per cent over October, 1930. And Yosemite has a particular beauty at this time of the year.

National Park figures are also accepted as indicating that motor travel has more than held its own in the face of unfavorable economic conditions. Travel to the parks broke all records during the past summer, passing the three million mark and exceeding the previous best season by fourteen per cent. Visitors to the parks up to September 30 totalled 3,152,845, compared with 2,774,561 for the same period last year.

For the sixth consecutive year Yosemite led all national parks, with 461,855. The four national parks in California, including Yosemite, General Grant, Sequoia, and Lassen, registered a gain of more than 50,000 visitors. More than ninety per cent of travel to the parks was by automobile.

The demagogue's secret of success has been revealed at last. Arthur Brisbane declares that the late Tom Watson of Georgia once confided to him that "the whole secret of success in politics is to remember that it is impossible to exaggerate the stupiity of te public." The bunk which certain politicians are able to make a majority of the voters believe convinces us that old Tom was more than half right.

Sam Small of the Atlanta Constntution, himself a staunch Democrat, appears to be unimpressed with the political sagacity of his fellow Southerners. He refers to the South as "the backbone, the breastbone and the bonehead of the Democratic party."

MAKE IMPROVEMENTS TO AID EMPLOYMENT

Four improvement projects with a view to job relief were initiated by the San Mateo city council last Monday night, including a proposal to require installation of concrete sidewalks throughout the fashionable San Mateo park district.

The other three projected improvements are planting of shade trees in Baywood Park, extension of San Mateo drive from Second to Third avenues and surfacing of streets in the southwest portion of Beresford Park.

City Manager Wilsey was instructed to prepare proceedings for the drive extension on a 29-foot width. An assessment district for the improvemnet estimated to cost $28,000 was tentatively drawn, bounded by Ellsworth avenue, Fifth avenue, El Camino Real and a line through the middle of the blocks between Baldwin avenue and Second, from El Camino Real to Ellsworth.

As further aid to employment of local workers, the manager was instructed to proceed with the Baywood tree planting by day labor. The work will be under way by December 1, said Wilsey.

TWENTY PRECINCTS ADDED TO COUNTY

San Mateo county voters will cast their ballots at 200 precincts at next year's elections, instead of the present 180 precincts, according to an ordinance making the new division, submitted to the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday by District Attorney Edmund Scott.

The city of San Mateo has two new precincts, and Burlingame one. Both communities have a total of 34 precincts under the new ordinance. Redwood City has 24, an increase of four.

The board passed an order wiping out the existing precinct boundary lines, and has until the last meeting in December to adopt the new precinct lines, now being studied.

BURLINGAME IS PROMISED BIG BUILDING PROGRAM

A gigantic Burlingame building project which calls for 370 new homes, nineteen blocks of apartment houses and twelve lots to be devoted to business was announced by the W. O. Lang Company last Tuesday, when it filed with the Burlingame city council maps of the subdivision of eighty-three acres of Crossways farm recently bought.

The plans had already been approved by tthe city planning commission and the council put its official o. k. on them.

Two sections are laid out in the subdivision which extends from the Burlingame high school to the Bayshore highway and from Burlingame avenue to Oak Grove avenue. The southeast portion of the subdivision is to be known as Burlinables and the northwest as Oak Grove Manor. The property was bought for a price quoted at more than $200,000.

Many a man who thinks he is protecting his wife through life insurance is merely laying up money for swindlers. GOVERNOR'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION ASKS PRAYER

Urging that the day be "set aside for prayer, reflection and thanksgiving," Governor James Rolph, Jr., has issued a Thanksgiving Day proclamation.

The Governor's proclamation said, in part:

"Let us reflect upon our own obligations, that we may do our part in helping the sick, the poor and the suffering; that through our characteristic California compassion we may care for our fellow men during these trying times.

"Let us have faith in our great commonwealth of California. It is the best place on earth. It is our home.

"Let us give thanks for our temporal and spiritual blessing; that this state has been able to advance projects of every character wherein the greatest number might be employed; that California stands united in its determination that none shall go hungry; that our spiritual life is high and our courage undaunted.

"I have requested, and hereby direct, that the flag be displayed on all state and public buildings and respectfully urge that city and county authorities do likewise."

CHINESE AVIATORS TRAIN AT MILLS FIELD

Chinese aviators can use the San Francisco municipal airport at Mills Field as a training school as long as they do not fly as a military unit of the Chinese republic. This statement has been made by Captain Roy Francis, superintendent of the San Francisco airport. He added further that the municipal airport can not be utilized as a training school by Chinese war pilots.

This policy is said to have been decided upon after Superintendent Francis and E. Jack Spaulding, chairman of the supervisors' airport committee, had conferred with City Attorney John J. O'Toole as a result of receiving numerous inquiries regarding the use of the airport for training of Chinese war pilots.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

W. E. Easton, editor of the Stillwater, Minn., Gazette, says:

That there are three things that should interest all good citizens, and could you guess what we mean?

About the first we would suggest for your good, as well as the last, is the habit of buying at home—not a difficult habit to contract and not difficult to continue, if you really are interested in the future wealth, and growth, and prosperity.

It isn't a difficult matter to trade at home. It means much to all business men, no matter whether they are engaged in manufacturing or running a shoe parlor.

You earn your money in your home town; some one in business gives you employment. Is it any more than fair that you should reciprocate? Would they be conducting a business that would give you work if the people at home did not patronize them? Just think this over.

And community building should be given much consideration. It means success for all of us, and should not be overlooked.

And last, but not least, how about advertising your business, your city, and even yourself. Advertising means the sale of everything on earth. Try it for yourself!

OPERATOR RECEIVES VOTE OF THANKS FOR SAVING SCHOOL

Alertness on the part of Mrs. Goldie Ellis, night operator at the Arlington office of the Riverside Cal., telephone exchange, recently saved the new $200,000 Chomawa Junior High School from probable destruction by fire. She answered a signal light at the switchboard shortly before midnight, but got no response to her "Number, please?" and heard strange sounds instead. Determining that the telephone line was that of the new school, she notified the police, who upon their arrival found a fire there. The Riverside Board of Education has given Mrs. Ellis a special vote of thanks since the prompt discovery of the blaze undoubtedly saved the building.

CALIFORNIA LEADS NATION IN RURAL ELECTRIC SERVICE

SAFETY EFFORT URGES PROPER AUTOMOBILE LIGHTS

With the slogan, "Legal Lights Lessen Danger," a statewide campaign for adequate and correctly adjusted headlights is being conducted this month by the California Committe on Public Saftey. This phase will be succeeded for the remainder of the month by a period of intensified enforcement of the law by cooperating state and local traffic police.

Senator Arthur H. Breed, chairman of the committee and director of the California State Automobile Association, in a statement commenting on the campaign, said:

"The proper lighting of an automobile must be conceded to be of paramount importance in these days of high speed and congested highways. Lighting is an outstanding feature of an automobile in which every motorist can realize the other person's negligence more than his own.

"The motorist who is required to drive against faulty or glaring headlights is the one who really suffers. The constant emphasis on being considerate of the other fellow has no greater significance than when it is applied to headlights."

The old gentleman sat down with infinite grace, with the young man he had addressed as Kurt beside him.

"I must ask your pardon," he said, "for intruding myself upon you in this fashion, Mr. Atridge, but I understood that you are a busy man and that this would be my best opportunity for an interview. May I introduce myself? My name is Rudolstein."

He made the announcement in exactly the same fashion as one would expect an English gentleman named Fitzalan-Howard to say his name was Fitzalan-Howard.

"This is my eldest boy, Kurt."

Kurt bowed from his chair in a fashion utterly alien to tea-shops.

Harold knew now that he was sitting at a marble-topped table in the presence of the king and the crown prince of European finance—of Solomon and Kurt Rudolstein, who owned "half of everything between the Rhine and the Black sea," and who were the life and soul of the Frankfurt kartel—and who were the present employers of Percy St. Saviour Wright.

"Please, Mr. Atridge, eat your lunch and don't wait for us," said Solomon Rudolstein. "I hope most sincerely that you do not mind a few minutes' conversation about business during your mealtime?"

"No," said Harold. That was the first articulate word he had uttered since Mr. Rudolstein's amazing entry.

"That is very good of you, Mr. Atridge. We can start at once without scruple, then."

"If you like," said Harold, clinging wildly to his sanity.

Mr. Rudolstein bent his head toward him; his mesmeric eyes seemed to pierce Harold through.

"I want to come," said Mr. Rudolstein, "to a peaceful settlement regarding the disposal of some property of mine."

"Er—yes," said Harold.

Mr. Rudolstein warmed to his subject.

"You notice, Mr. Atridge," he said, "that I said some property of mine. You hold some letters to which I am entitled. They were purchased from the original owner by my son here"—he indicated the young exquisite at his elbow—"and passed on to me. How they came into your possession is immaterial. It is necessary that you should return them to me. Should you refuse,"—and the admission of the possibility of a refusal was a surprisingly false step for so old a hand—"there are several courses open to me. I could take steps to recover my property by legal process."

Harold merely gaped.

"I could sue you for them in the courts," said Rudolstein. Harold thought of red-hot pokers and leaden clubs; he felt suddenly irritated and anxious to make himself unpleasant as well.

"You'd have to prove your title," he said boldly. "Have you got any receipts?"

Of course Mr. Rudolstein had none and he showed it in his face. He had made the mistake of considering Harold too simple, just as Bauer had believed him to be deeper than he was.

"Why argue like that?" he asked. "You would not face the publicity of an action."

"Neither would you," snapped Harold, hitting the nail on the head as accurately as he had hit Hawkins.

Mr. Rudolstein sidestepped and maintained the rally. "It would be of some inconvenience to us, I admit, and because of that we would be willing to make some adjustment if the case were settled out of court. Shall we say fifty pounds?"

Solomon Rudolstein had climbed to his present position largely through his ability to offer, straight-faced, fifty pounds for something he was prepared to pay fifty thousand for. But he did not know that Harold knew that he had offered Wright five thousand pounds for Harold's person. Harold tore his eyes from Rudolstein's; he wanted to think, and he could not think like that. For half a second his gaze rested on young Kurt Rudolstein's face. That splendid young man was not possessed of his father's magnificent self-control. Solomon Rudolstein's casual offer of fifty pounds for the worth of a kingdom tickled Kurt immensely. His face twitched with amusement just as Harold set eyes on it; only a twitch—and it settled into immobility a second later—but Harold noticed it, and his spirit rose in fury. Harold would rather be clubbed than made fun of. And for once he had a retort ready. He jerked himself out of his chair.

"My bill, please," he said, catching the waitress' eye. Then the tea-shop customers were treated to the spectacle of an inconsiderable young man striding out of the place, while a multimillionaire cringed at his elbow pleading for further consideration. But Harold was too hot under the collar to listen, the accumulated annoyances of the past week had at last had their result. He put down bill and money at the cash desk and thrust through the swing doors.

Rudolstein stamped in impotent rage. Harold's bank was only fifty yards away, and Harold had gone in.

Harold was back in the bank, and his fury had in no way abated. He was sick of everything connected with King Raphael or with European finance. And he had by now matured a plan to rid himself of all responsibility in the matter and to extricate himself as cleanly as possible. The symbolic fading of his black eye seemed deeply significant to him. He was going to shrug off the whole business.

First of all Harold had to consult Whitaker's Almanack, along with other works of reference. The list of the cabinet told him that the present foreign secretary was the Marquis of Cairn-Gorm. A little more research revealed this gentleman further as the Most Honorable the Marquis of Cairn-Gorm, K. T., G. C. B., G. C. V. O., etc.

Harold reached for a sheet of bank paper, dated it, and began.

"The Most Honorable the Marquis of Cairn-Gorm, K. T., G. C. B., G. C. V. O.

"243, Carlton House Terrace, W. 1.

"My Lord Marquis,

"I enclose various letters of the king of Lesser Avaria, which have happened to come into my possession. Circumstances have led me to believe that considerable importance is attached to them, in that various attempts have been made to obtain them. Some of these attempts were carried as far as personal violence toward myself, and moreover I have been offered large sums of money in exchange for the letters.

"Because such importance is attached to them, and because I am in doubt as to who is the rightful owner I am anxious that your lordship should take possession of them, and, if your lordship sees fit, to make use of them in any way which seems in accordance with your lordship's foreign policy.

"I must ask your lordship's pardon for thrusting this responsibility upon you, but I am afraid it is more than I can cope with. Also I would be greatly obliged if your lordship would be prepared to vouch for the soundness of the reasons for the disturbance of my work for this bank during the last few days, should my employers be dissatisfied, and also if, as I believe is possible, your lordship could take steps to assure the people who have been annoying me that the letters are no longer in my possession and that further annoyance would be unprofitable.

"I remain,

"Your lordship's most obedient servant,

"HAROLD N. ATRIDGE."

With this completed to his satisfaction, Harold next approached Mr. Knott, the cashier. He took a form and filled it in, and handed it over.

Five minutes later Harold was stuffing his own letter and King Raphael's neatly into a registered envelope, and two minutes after that he was in the post office next door obtaining a receipt.

Island of the Nuraghis

Sardinia is the island of the Naraghis, and what is a Nuraghi? They are as mysterious as the round towers of Ireland or the Druid remains at Stonehenge. From the undated past, Sardinia has had scattered over its landscape, especially in the North, rock towers often rising to a hundred feet with a round base. The stones are unhewn and joined without mortar. There are traces of about 8,000 on the island, and they are said to have been burial chambers, temples, granaries or refuge places, or perhaps just castles of days of violence long ago. They are cavelike inside and unlit by windows, and today only a storm-beset shepherd will seek them out, for they are abandoned to snakes and decay.

Says New Buildings Ungodly

"There is a saying that God made the country and the devil made the towns," said Sir Thomas Comyn-Platt in an address before the council for the Preservation of Rural England, in London recently. "When I walk in London and see the buildings they are erecting I can quite believe they are not the work of the Almighty. England owes everything to the country."

PETER TELLS MRS. PETER ALL ABOUT IT

When things look dark, pray, do not quit;
Get busy then and use your wit.

IT IS by doing just this that Peter Rabbit has succeeded in getting out of all kinds of scrapes. If Peter were the kind to give up easily he long ago would have made a good dinner for Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote, or Hooty the Owl or Roughleg the Hawk, or some other of those who have a fondness for rabbit.

When Peter told Mrs. Peter that in letting Bowser the Hound keep close to his heels all the way through the Green Forest and half way across the Green Meadows to the dear Old Brier Patch he had been fooling Old Man Coyote, she didn't know what to think.

"What did Old Man Coyote have to do with it?" she demanded just a wee bit crossly, for she had been terribly frightened as she watched Peter seemingly having such hard work to keep out of the clutches of Bowser the Hound. "I didn't see him anywhere."

Peter chuckled. "It was this way, my dear," he began. "I was sitting near the pond of Paddy the Beaver over in the Green Forest last night where Honker the Goose and eleven of his followers were fast asleep, when I saw Old Man Coyote and Reddy and Granny Fox hide close to the edge of the pond. By and by I saw that some of those sleeping geese were drifting in right toward them. I waited until I didn't dare wait another minute, and then I thumped the danger signal to waken them. Paddy the Beaver heard me and slapped the water with his tail, and that made them open their eyes in a hurry. The instant I had thumped I ran, for I knew that the nearest hiding place was an old bramble-tangle, and that was a long way off, and I felt sure that Old Man Coyote would try to get even with me for spoiling his chance of getting a fat goose. Half way there I stopped to listen, which was a very foolish thing to do. Old Man Coyote almost caught me there.

"What Did Old Man Coyote Have to Do With It?" She Demanded.

"He's smart, Old Man Coyote is. I never realized until last night how smart he is. You see, he knew that the nearest place of safety for me was that old bramble-tangle, and he guessed that I would do just what I did do—stop before I got there. So the instant I thumped he started for the bramble-tangle to try to catch me, and he nearly did it, too. Just look at my tail. Did you ever see such a looking tail?" Peter twisted around and looked mournfully at the ragged little white bunch which he called a tail.

"He so nearly caught me that he pulled a bunch of hair out of my tail just as I reached the bramble-tangle. I never before had such a narrow escape in all my life. Then he told me that I never would get back to dear Old Brier Patch unless I got him a fat goose to make up for the one I had cheated him out of by waking Honker and the others and I knew by the way he said it that he meant it. Of course, he knew that I couldn't, and wouldn't if I could, get him a goose. It was his way of telling me that he meant to catch me. Then he trotted away, and I knew perfectly well that he had gone to hide somewhere along the way I would have to get home.

"I kept trying and trying to think of some way to get here, for I knew how worried you would be, my dear, but I couldn't think of a single plan until Bowser the Hound came nosing along this morning and found me there in the bramble-tangle. Then all in a flash it came to me how I could get home. I hopped right out in front of Bowser and pretended that something was the matter for me and I ran, keeping just out of his reach, and all the time pretending that I couldn't run any faster. Right on the edge of the Green Forest, hiding behind a pile of brush, was Old Man Coyote, just as I had suspected he would be. I wish you could have seen him when I went past almost under his nose. You see, he didn't dare jump out because Bowser was right at my heels. When it was safe to do so I showed Bowser how I can run when I want to, and here I am. I'd give another bunch of hair out of my tail to know what Old Man Coyote said when I skipped past. Ha, ha, ha! There's nothing like a little wit, my dear, to get you out of trouble."

Little Mrs. Peter drew a long breath and her eyes were shining with pride and admiration. "My, how smart you are, Peter!" she cried. "Still I do wish that you would stay at home and not take such dreadful risks," she added.

Arms of Law for Great Bridge

WHEN the new and magnificient George Washington bridge which stretches across the Hudson river from New York city to the New Jersey shore was formally opened the other day, the eighty-eight members of the bridge police force were given their share of admiration and praise. These men, guarding traffic across the longest span in the world, were appointed by the port authority of New York and New Jersey which built and controls the bridge, and all are picked officers. Part of them are seen here being put through a traffic signal drill.

How I Carry On

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

If I am part of all the past,
If dead men's souls still live in me,
If rocks are only rocks re-cast,
Each oak the acorn of some tree,
If I am part of what is gone,
I wonder how I carry on?

This boulder traveled from the north
Upon some glacier's icy blast,
That they who journeyed back and forth
Along this road might pause and rest,
And yet how many men in me
Will find a little charity?

This oak tree, when an oak tree fell,
Rose from its roots and spread its shade;
And, when the sun beat down as well,
How much of shadow have I made
To cool some other fellow's brow
As this old oak tree cools me now?

And, if some mortal loved the right,
And died, who had so bravely fought,
How well did I take up the fight,
Or was his struggle all for naught?
I took his gifts, but now he's gone,
I wonder how I carry on?

Mother's Cook Book

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

A dainty food especially good for an invalid and simple to prepare is:

Chicken Custard.

Take three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped and pounded chicken, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, two well beaten eggs, a pinch of salt and one of celery salt, a cupful of milk. Mix thoroughly, pour into well greased custard cups and place in a pan of water. Bake in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Serve hot.

Turkey Stuffing.

Crumb a good sized loaf of bread, chop two medium sized onions and fry until soft in one cupful of butter; when tender but not brown, pour over the bread crumbs, mix lightly, add one cupful of finely cut celery, two hard cooked eggs chopped, one cupful of broken walnut meats, a pair of cooked sweetbreads, salt, pepper and minced parsley. Mix well, fill the turkey, adding a few nice olives at intervals. Do not pack too tightly. If a plainer dressing is desired sweetbreads may be omitted and a little cooked veal substituted, or the nuts and olives may be left out.

Chicken Chow.

Cook a chicken until tender, adding salt and one or two small dried peppers. When tender pick the meat from the bones as for cream chicken. Prepare noodles, using one egg, salt, a tablespoonful of cream and flour to roll as thin as paper. Cut and dry for an hour or two. In a baking pan put a layer of the noodles, then a layer of chicken, a layer of sliced hard cooked egg, add a little broth and finish the top with noodles; cover with buttered crumbs. Bake for half an hour.

Ginger Ale and Pear Salad.

Boil the sirup from a can of pears, add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin softened in one-fourth of a cupful of water, add one-fourth cupful of sugar. Cool and add one cupful of ginger ale and the pears cut into small pieces. Pour into a mold and when firm serve with whipped cream and a tablespoonful of salad dressing. This is nice for dessert.

Longer Skirts Seem to Be Edict of Fashion

How long shall we have our daytime frocks? We hear one thing and another, from various sources, and hardly know what to do with our new frock hems because of the diversity of opinions.

Now, we sit back and ponder the skirt-length question. It is twelve inches from the ground for all our daytime things. This takes us up to our formal afternoon functions, when we get picturesque and have leisure to manage our trailing skirts.

Last season's accepted daytime length was thirteen inches, so longer skirts do prevail.

The Old Gardener Says:

MANY garden makers are obtaining much satisfaction by the use of peat-moss as a mulch. This is especially true in sections where there has been a prolonged drought. Granulated peat-moss is a better mulch than stable litter or grass. It prevents the evaporation of moisture from the soil and enables the garden maker to avoid hours of cultivation. When a mulch of this kind is spread over the perennial bed it serves a useful purpose by conserving moisture, and becomes a fertilizer when dug in as a part of the spring work. Moreover, it helps to protect the roots during the winter. In some gardens this plan of using peat as a mulch has been extended to the rose bed, with decided success.

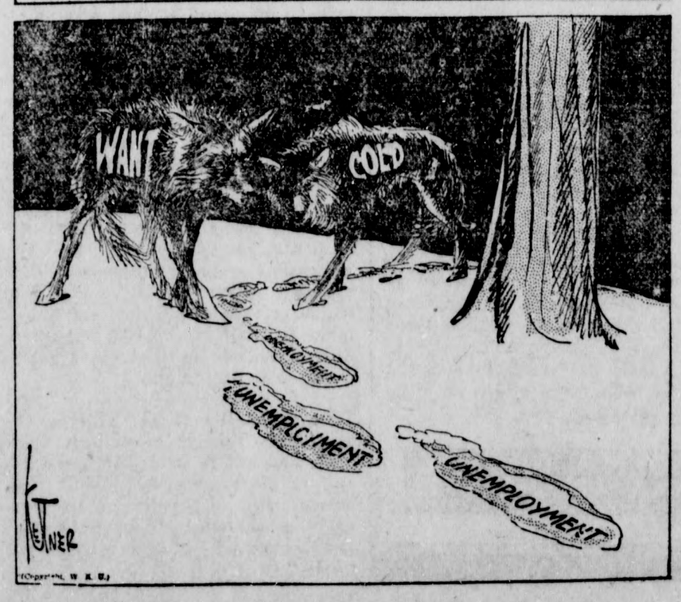
Help Destroy Them



LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

by WALTER TRUMBULL

Nothing so stirs the imagination of the human race as buried treasure. From childhood, man wants to dig for it. He never gets over wanting to dig for it. Expeditions constantly are being organized to unearth hidden hoards of silver and of gold. Old maps are still handed down in some families, showing the spot where buried riches are supposed to lie. Books which deal with treasure have to be carefully watched in the New York public library. Readers are constantly tearing out pages and illustrations.

SURE WAS TOUCHED

Jack—I suppose you were touched when your wife gave you that one-hundred-dollar watch on your birthday?

Tom—You said it. Exactly one hundred.

For example, Ralph D. Paine wrote a book on buried treasure and put an index in the back. It isn't there in the library copy. Somebody tore it out long ago. Probably the man who has it never has been east of the Battery or west of the Hudson, but he likes to feel that some day he will start out on a journey of rich adventure.

The New York aquarium probably holds the greatest collection of rare fish in the United States and possibly in the world. It is a notable exhibit. The other day the aquarium was almost empty. I doubt whether there was a total of a dozen visitors in all that big building. About four blocks away is a sea food restaurant. In the window of this place is a glass box, about four feet long, filled with water. Swimming around in it was one lonely and very ordinary fish. Outside the window, watching the fish swim, was a crowd of perhaps forty persons. They blocked traffic on the sidewalk. That's New York.

A well-known woman painter in New York attended an exhibition of pictures. On her return home, she was telling her brother, who goes in for sport and knows surprisingly little about art, what an enjoyable afternoon she had experienced.

"I met the nicest young man," she said. "He was a big, handsome blond and he talked so intelligently about some of the pictures that I asked him if he was a painter himself, but he said he was not."

"What did the guy do?" asked her brother.

"I haven't the slightest idea," said the woman, "but I remember his name. It was Tunney."

My wife is urging me to move to Farmington, New Mexico, and go on a fruit diet. She contends that for a dollar you can buy there enough melons, peaches and grapes to support a family for a week and that the quality is far superior to anything found in a New York market. But, while I am fond of fruit in moderation, what I am looking for is some place where for a dollar one can buy enough beefsteak to live on for a week. In my case, that means a lot of beefsteak.

Walter Banks has been showing me some pictures of his truly lovely sisters. One of these harmony singers and dancers is a blond and the other a brunette. If they sing and dance as well as they photograph, it will not be long before they will be seen in some musical show on Broadway.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

Breaking Up a Whig Parade

GEORGE FISHER was one of the best known stage coach drivers on the old National pike in the 1840's. He was noted for his manipulation of fiery steeds.

There was a fractious team at Claysville, Pa., that was the terror of all the drivers on that section of the road. It had "run off" once, killing one passenger and injuring several, on Caldwell's hill, seven miles west of Washington, Pa.

Every driver who had been given the team had despaired of taming these fiery horses, so Fisher was sent for. He had been driving out of Washington, Pa., and after taking charge of the team he soon had it under control. He drove it many years without an accident.

Fisher was driving this team in 1844, during the celebrated political contest between James K. Polk and Henry Clay, opposing candidates for the Presidency. Fisher was an ardent supporter of Polk, and bitter in his enmity toward the Whigs.

One day in 1844 there was a large mass meeting of Whigs in Washington, Pa. An "extra" coach, specially chartered, passed over the road going west, with Fisher at the reins, going from Claysville to Roney's Point.

There was a delay just beyond the state line of West Virginia. A delegation of Whigs, flaunting banners and with music blaring, were en route from West Alexander to Washington to attend the mass meeting.

On their return home in the evening, while they were parading along the National pike, with banners flying and bands playing, they were overhauled by George Fisher and his coach.

Fisher drove his teams, one of which was the famous "unbroken" span he had mastered years before, and his coach into the Whig procession at several points. Buggies were damaged, carriages and light wagons broken, and several persons were injured.

Colin Wilson, a prominent citizen of Washington, Pa., was one of the injured. The town of Washington demanded that Fisher be held to account for his action, and the resultant investigation stirred that section of the country as nothing else had done for years.

Fisher explained that the "bad" team he was driving became frightened when it encountered the banners and the music. He claimed that the breaking up of the Whig procession was unintentional, was just an accident.

The reputation of his team was well known, especially in the vicinity of Washington, Pa., and his explanation served as a plausible excuse. The fame of the team saved Fisher from prosecution and probable severe punishment.

But the Whigs of that neighborhood went to their graves solemnly believing that Fisher did it on purpose.

Fisher in later years would not discuss the incident, but he intimated to his many friends that the team must have known the paraders were Whigs, and had the same feeling toward them that he had.

The same team, just before Fisher took the reins, had made a reputation as "killers." One man had been killed and several injured in a mad dash of the horses.

A few days before Fisher took charge of the recalcitrant team, the horses dashed down the long hill from the locust tree at Caldwell's tavern, to Wickert's bridge.

A Mr. Moses—He never was identified further—was seriously injured; the driver was severely hurt and three passengers were injured.

Mr. Moses, a Kentucky merchant, suffered a badly crushed leg. He died two days later in the hospital at Washington, Pa.

The driver of the stage coach was so seriously injured that he did not recover until the next spring. He spent the winter recuperating at the Caldwell tavern.

The other passengers in the coach were not injured.

Happy Moon Legends

Na-quil.

Many suns and moons and snows ago there was born to Na-quil, god of the sky, and his wife, a son.

Now Na-quil, who had all the storms, rain and snow to attend to, as well as the thunder and lightning, was very busy. But just the same he sat down on the edge of a cloud and tried to think of the best gift he could give his son.

Because he lived in the sky, Na-quil was very fond of blue. And Na-quil remembered that once he had seen a blue stone exactly the color of the sky.

So Na-quil pounded on the edge of the cloud and Kee Yay, his helper, came running.

"Blue beads are the finest things in the world," said Na-quil. "My son shall have many blue beads. I'd better fly down and ask Ools Kah Stee where those stones are."

"Here are your wings," and Kee Yay handed him the claws, beak and wings of a golden eagle. The wings are seven feet from tip to tip and Kee Yay can hardly lift them.

"While you are flying, are you going by that valley over there? It is only a thousand miles, and they need rain badly," said Kee Yay.

"No, I'm in a hurry to get the beads," said Na-quil. "Ools Kah Stee goes to bed with the sun. I must hurry."

"But, the Great Valley needs rain badly," said Kee Yay.

"I'll send them some," promised Na-quil.

Na-quil had put on all of his eagle suit except one wing. He had not put his arm into the right wing yet, so with his free hand he gathered up a cloud and rolled it into a ball. Then he threw the ball a thousand miles into the valley. The ball hit against a hill on the other side of the Great Valley. Then they had rain in the Great Valley, and Na-quil flew down to visit Ools Kah Stee.

Ools Kah Stee is a great snake. He lives down in the earth and he is king of the Under-ground. His name means "Fearless," but when he saw Na-quil flying toward him he moved near his hole.

"Good flying to you," said Ools Kah Stee.

"The same—I mean, I wish you good weather," said Na-quil.

"The weather could be better," replied Ools Kah Stee, looking over toward the Great Valley. "But can I do something for you?"

"Yes, I am going to give my son a string of blue beads to wear when he is older. Will you give me some of your sky-stones?"

"If you will stop the storm that is flooding the Great Valley you can have all you wish."

"I'll stop the storm," said Na-quil. "Good-by."

Na-quil dipped his wings in the waters and then shook out his feathers and the water dried up.

Na-quil had dried up most of the waters when he came to a waterfall high up in the mountain.

This was the very place where the storm ball had struck, and it had knocked down a little tree. The tree lay across the stream and the rocks held it so it could not get away.

It was a brave little tree and though the river pounded it and threw rocks and branches at it and bent it, the little tree would not break. Every time it was bent it sprang back straight.

Its bark was cut and its branches broken, but it sang a song to the angry river.

"This tiny tree fights better than any large one I ever saw," said Na-quil. "Even though it is torn from its roots and is soon to die, it sings."

Through the cut bark Na-quil could see the white heart of the tree.

"What a strong heart," he said. "It will be a better gift for my son than many blue beads. I shall give it to him."

So Na-quil stopped the river and picked up the little tree. He flew to the mountain where he had left his wife and his little brown son. He hurried into the house. The baby winked when the baby's eyes winked shut, Na-quil caused the strong heart of the tree to enter and live in his son.

When other people heard of this, they named the boy Strong Heart.

Under questioning, Baker confessed to police he entered the clothing store every Saturday night for the past few months, "borrowed" the suit and then returned it Sunday night.

Relics Discovered in Ancient Burial Mound

East St. Louis, Ill.—Discoveries of bits of pottery and charred maize which give evidence of the site of prehistoric Cahokia village were uncovered here recently in a mound by the University of Illinois archeological survey, according to G. M. Stirling, in charge of the excavations.

The explorations, which were launched a few months ago under the direction of Dr. A. R. Kelly, anthropologist and head of the university Ming dynasty, which survived in China from 1368 to 1644. As near as can be figured, the rare woven ornament was one of the many valuable objects stolen from the royal palace in Pekin when the Mings were overthrown by the Manchus and driven to the Burmese border of Yunnan.

Rare Chinese Tapestry Is Found in New York

New York.—Lost for nearly three centuries, a rare Chinese tapestry, valued by Manhattan art connoisseurs at $150,000, reappeared here in a strange manner.

Unaware of its value the antique dealer rented the tapestry for a relatively small sum.

Research experts discovered that the piece was a genuine tapestry of the "Coming Up to Scratch"

TO SAY of a man that he comes up to scratch is to indicate that he meets the requirements of the particular situation confronting him, and, by inference, that he is able to cope with whatever may be in store for him.

As is the case with many other phrases that are now used metaphorically in everyday communcation, "coming up to scratch" once had a literal sense.

The phrase comes from the world of pugilism. Years ago, before the advent of the modern fistic amphitheater, the practitioners of the manly art, so-called, engaged each other on the bare turf.

Their fighting area was not the roped square, which was a later refinement, but was simply an inclosure marked off with deep scratches dug into the ground with any instrument available for the purpose. The inside of this inclosure was again marked or scratched off with lines upon which the respective contestants would place one foot, so coming up to the scratch line, when prepared to advance toward the other.

It is from these circumstances that there arose the expression "coming up to scratch" to indicate somebody who was on the spot and ready for action.

archeological survey, and Stirling, have resulted in the uncovering of many pieces of pottery, charred Indian corn, hickory nuts, and bits of three-ply plaited rope.

According to Stirling these fragments of pottery fitted together form elaborately designed pieces giving evidence of a high-typed Cahokia village. The things unearthed were not found under the mound as usual, but in it.

Lightning and Autos

The bureau of standards says that the fact that automobiles are supported on rubber tires would probably have no appreciable effect on the probability of the automobiles' being struck by lightning. Likewise, the wetting of the automobile by rain would probably produce no appreciable effect. The inclosure effected by the automobiles would probably afford some degree of protection to persons within. Persons within a conducting inclosure are safe against lightning. The automobile body, although the inclosure is in a large measure effected by glass, approaches this condition.

First English Letter

Sir John Pelham is stated to have been the first to receive a private letter written in the English language. It was sent by his wife in 1399. Latin was the language in which letters and communications of every kind were written to the time of the accession of Edward I. French continued to predominate as the language of correspondence until the reign of Edward III. An act of parliament then provided that the English language should in future be the language of legislation, and the French language, which had been spoken since the conquest, ceased to be used.

SCOUTS ORGANIZE AEROPLANE CLUB

Two months ago a club was organized in Daly City under the supervision of Mr. E. R. Bradford, with headquarters at 21 Gambetta street. The club is known as the Eagle Model Aeroplane Club, and the membership has been increasing very rapidly, and has now been made into a branch of the Boy Scouts of Daly City, with E. R. Bradford as chief pilot.

Any boy interested in the Boy Scouts is eligible to join this club. When he becomes a member he starts immediately under the leadership of E. R. Bradford, chief pilot, to build his own plane, and he will receive instructions from the chief until he becomes efficient in his work. There are also rules and regulations to be obeyed by the members, and in so doing the strictest discipline is observed, while they are receiving their instruction in model plane building. After they have completed their work on the model planes, contests will be held, and each Boy Scout will receive his wings, which qualify him as a pilot of the club.

The club is operated wholly for the benefit of the boys of the community, and has the hearty support of A. Bodien, Scout Master, so come along, boys, and receive absolutely free instruction in model plane building, under a skilled mechanic. For further particulars, call Randolph 9113, any evening after 5:30, and Chief Pilot Bradford will gladly welcome you into this newly organized club.

TEAM-WORK THE KEYNOTE AT LONGFELLOW P. T.A.

Teamwork between the school and Parent-Teacher unit is the keynote which marked the success of the Longfellow program for Fathers' Night.

In his address on "Father Membership in the Parent-Teacher Association," Joseph A. Hard One to Figure

Long Boy: "Big Boy, wuz George Washington as honest as dey say he wuz?"

Shorty: "Ah tell you, man, George wuz de honestest man wot ever wuz bo'n."

Long Boy: "Den how come they close all de banks on his birthday?"

"What's that mark on your forehead?"

"That is a birthmark."

"Yes?"

"Yep, tried to get into the wrong berth."

A rented house is never quite a home. To the outsider it may have all the earmarks, but it falls short in the one great respect. You can never say or feel "It's all our own."

He Called Them—

Judge (to victim of hold-up): "While you were being relieved of your valuables, did you call the police?"

Victim: Yes, your Honor, everything I could think of."

Don't wait until it is too late! Repair it when the trouble starts.

His Business

"I think you said that you had a brother in the mining business, didn't you, Rastus?"

"Yeh, boss, that's right."

"What kind of mining—gold mining, silver mining, or copper mining?"

"No, sah; kalsomining, sah."

Had Been Advised

"Gee, there are a lot of girls who don't want to get married."

"And how do you know?"

"I've asked them."

Wrong Instrument

Jockey: "Say, niggah! Hold de stop watch on me while I runs dis greased lightnin' round de track."

Tout: "You can't time 'at horse with no watch, boy. Yo' needs a calendar."

There are homes in our community that could be improved by paint. We have the paint.

Mary had a little lamb;
The plot begins to thicken;
She sold it to a restaurant—
And now they call it chicken.
